

Abstract

The invention concerns a pharmaceutical product consisting of one or more standard active substances and/or of one or more standard metabolites acting on the central nervous system. Said active substances are added with substances acting on the nasal mucous membrane for endonasal administration.